OUR STORY

GENERATIONS OF HERITAGE

Four decades into our story, Kailis Jewellery is proudly family owned and operated. Uniquely Australian, our jewellery is graced with the richest of natural lustres of the incredibly rare Australian South Sea pearl. Certified and untouched, Kailis pearls are unlike any other on Earth.

We embrace natural beauty and individuality, both in our jewellery and in its wearer. With this, no two pieces are exactly alike, and each collection is iconic by design. Bestowed with our signature secret black diamond, our 'K' hallmark, and crafted to stand out and transcend the course of time, Kailis Jewellery goes further than the eye can see.

FOREVER CONNECTED TO THE SEA

Merchant seamen, hailing from the small Greek island of Castellorizo, the Kailis family immigrated to Western Australia in the mid-1900s. In 1977, husband and wife team Michael George Kailis AO CBE and Dr Patricia Kailis AM OBE pioneered pearl farming in the pristine waters off the remote north-west coast of Australia.

In 1978, they opened the first pearl jewellery store in Broome. A beautiful and unspoilt part of the world that has become synonymous with the rare and exquisite Australian South Sea pearl.

We are dedicated to honouring the beauty of the pearl through iconic Kailis designs.

Contemporary pieces for today. Heirlooms for tomorrow.

OUR PEARLS

Australian South Sea pearls are born from the revered Pinctada maxima oyster. They have the thickest nacre and a lustre, colour and size to rival any other. The Pinctada maxima only produces one cultured pearl every two to three years - a true miracle of nature.

We are devoted to the Australian South Sea pearl. These exquisite gems secretly gain their beauty with the passage of time, their splendour realised only at the reveal. Our pearls choose their wearer. At this moment, an everlasting connection between Kailis Jewellery and its wearer begins.

A TRUE MIRACLE OF NATURE.

PEARL VIRTUES

Kailis pearls are unlike any other on Earth. Born from the rare Australian Pinctada maxima oyster; they have the thickest nacre and a lustre, colour and size to rival any other.

1. LUSTRE

Unique to this precious gem, lustre is the radiant quality of the surface as light reflects through the countless layers of nacre within the pearl. Australian South Sea pearls have the most naturally illuminating lustre of all pearl types; it will never fade and requires no additional treatment.

2. COMPLEXION

A pearl with a flawless surface is exceptionally rare. The quality of complexion is influenced by the number and size of imperfections and their degree of visibility. Our pearls do not undergo any treatment or polishing and the marks on the surface are natural characteristics that make each pearl individual – much like their wearer.

3. SHAPE

Our pearls come in an array of unique shapes. These include distinctive varieties such as circle, drop, oval, button, baroque and keshi. We also showcase incredibly rare, perfectly round pearls in our jewellery designs.

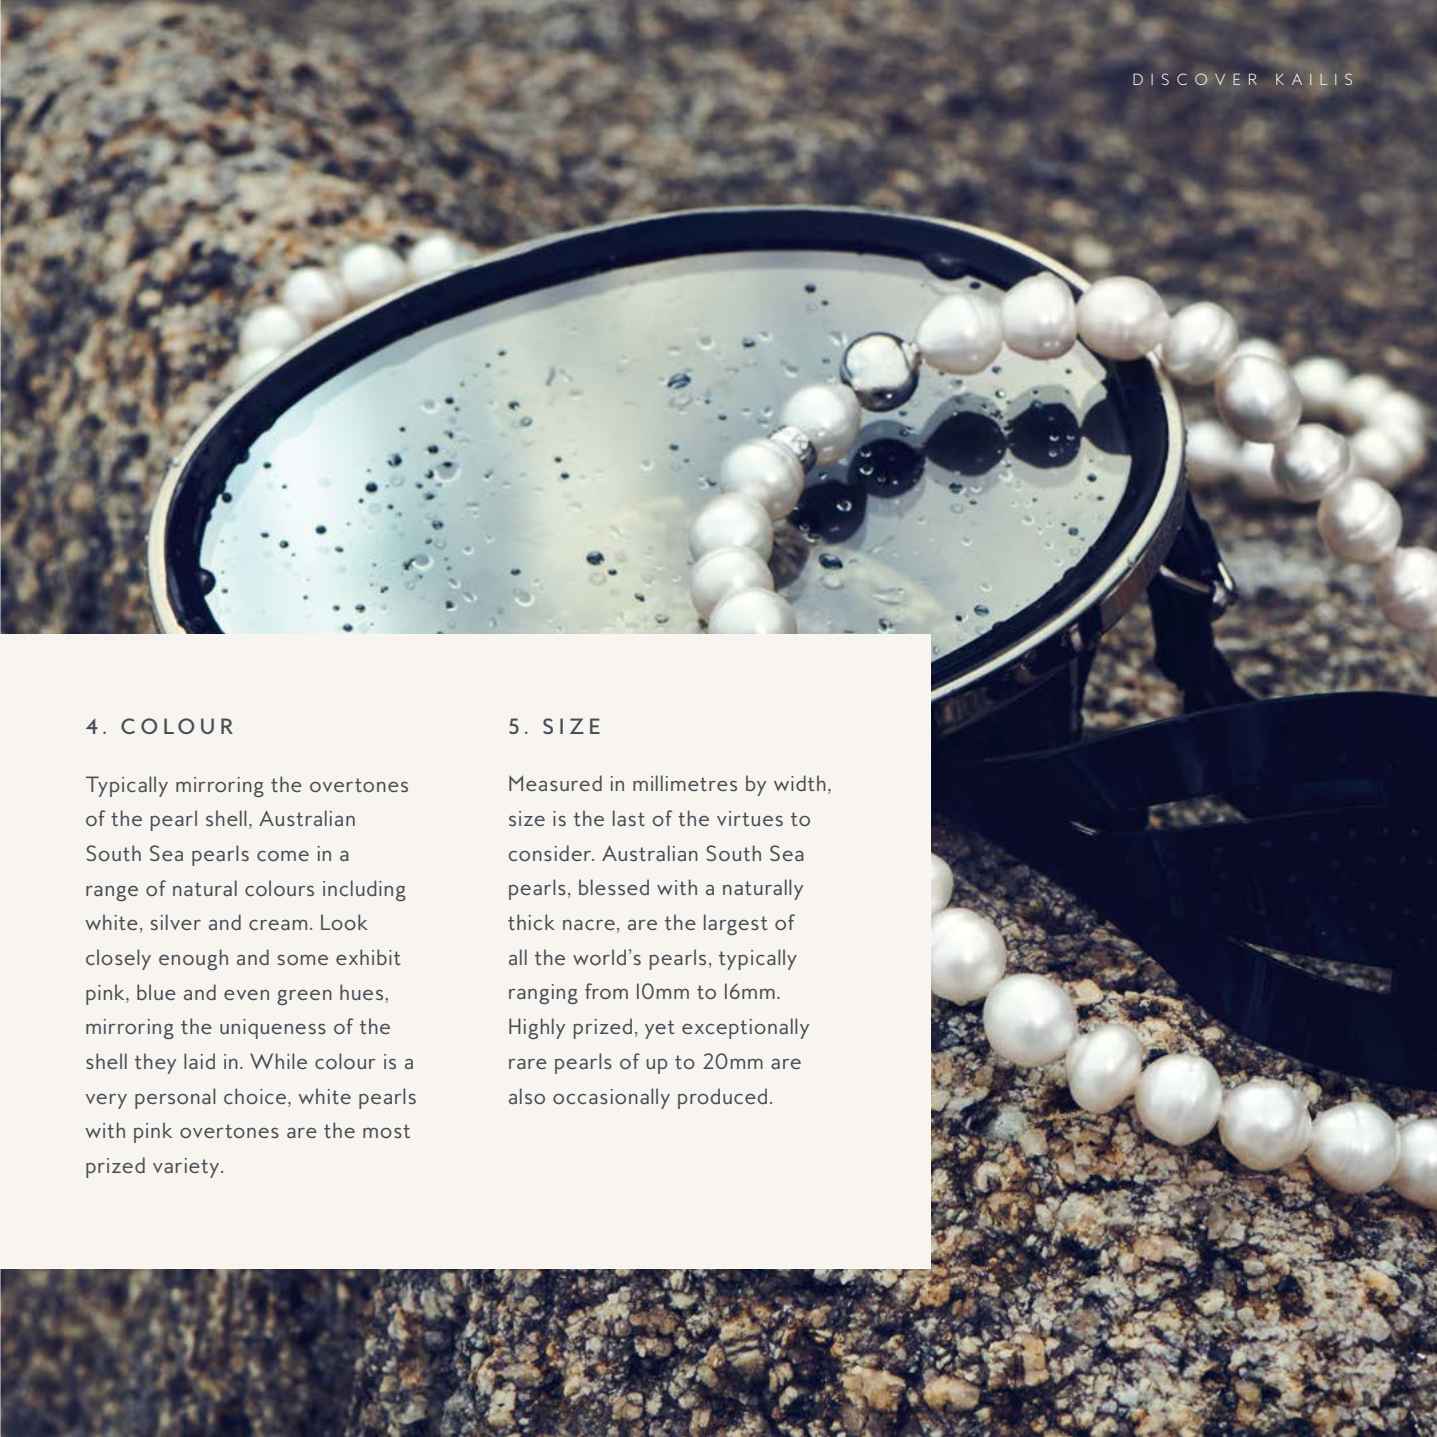

4. COLOUR

Typically mirroring the overtones of the pearl shell, Australian South Sea pearls come in a range of natural colours including white, silver and cream. Look closely enough and some exhibit pink, blue and even green hues, mirroring the uniqueness of the shell they laid in. While colour is a very personal choice, white pearls with pink overtones are the most prized variety.

5. SIZE

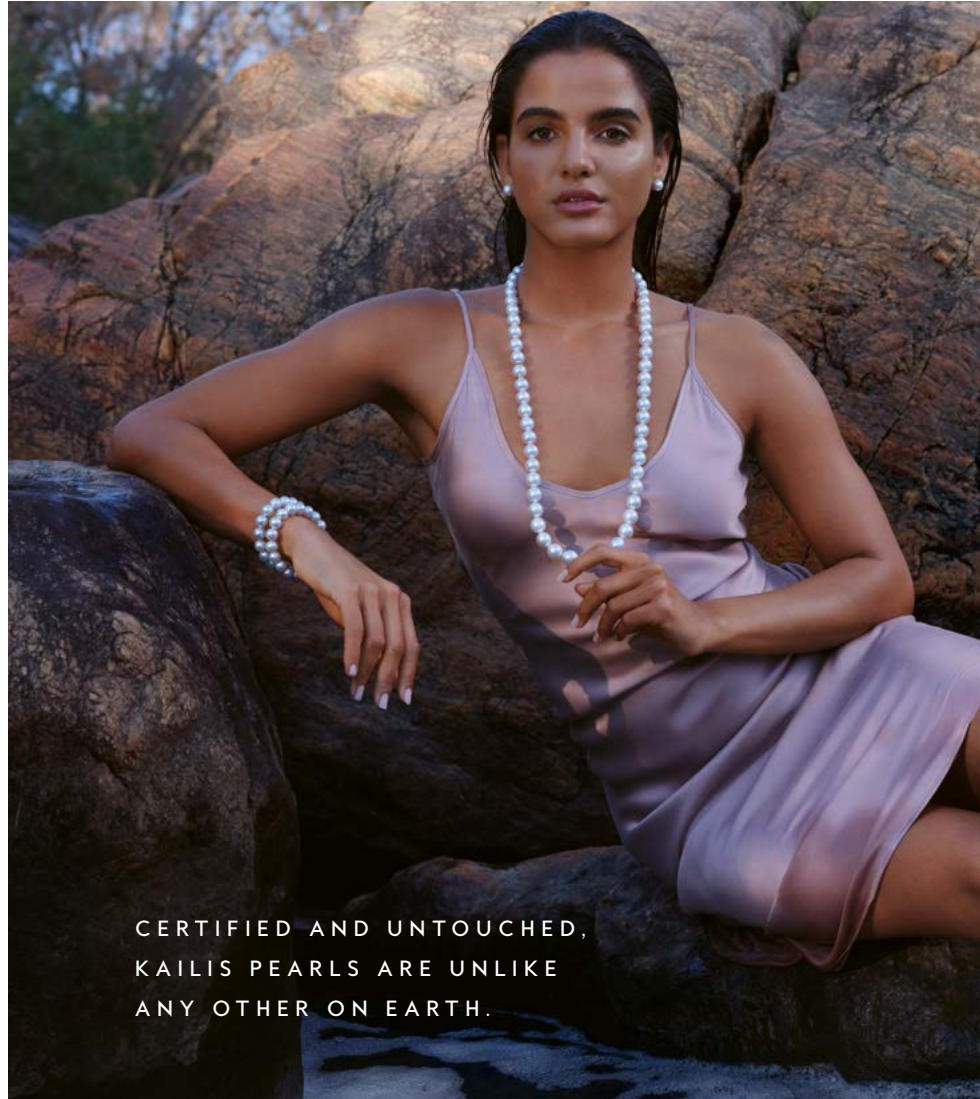

Measured in millimetres by width, size is the last of the virtues to consider. Australian South Sea pearls, blessed with a naturally thick nacre, are the largest of all the world's pearls, typically ranging from 10mm to 16mm. Highly prized, yet exceptionally rare pearls of up to 20mm are also occasionally produced.
